

The Joy of Sox: The Spectrum Model of Holistic Medicine, as illustrated by the 2004 Baseball World Series

By Eric Leskowitz, MD
Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital
125 Nashua St.
Boston MA 02114
rleskowitz@pol.net

copyright © 2005 Eric Leskowitz

*Dedicated to the 2004 Red Sox,
and to the formerly long-suffering inhabitants of Red Sox Nation*

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1. Introduction	1 - 3
Baseball and holistic medicine?	1
Overview of multidimensional health	2
The 2004 Boston Red Sox as a case study	3
2. The Body - conventional biomedicine	3 - 5
Surgery (ankle) and medications	4
Lifestyle modification – nutrition and exercise	4
Manual medicine – chiropractic (migraines)	5
3. Thoughts & Emotions - stress management	6-11
Humor, the Inner Child, and the “joy of Sox”	7
Meditation and staying in the flow – “The Idiots”	8
Cognitive restructuring – athletic alchemy	10
Unconditional love – the true healer	10
4. Relationships – interpersonal health	11 - 15
Group support and “chemistry”	11
Emotional dynamics – team vs. ego	12
Red Sox Nation	13
5. Subtle Energy I – energy medicine	15 - 16
Acupuncture (tendinitis)	15
Homeopathy, Therapeutic Touch, Reiki, etc.	16
6. Subtle Energy II – group effects	16 - 20
The home field advantage (distant attention, the memory of water, and conditioned spaces)	17
Team energetic cohesion	20
7. Spirit - the non-local dimension	20 - 27
Archetypal energies: the Evil One, the Underdog, the Scapegoat, and the Messiah	21
Religious faith – Christian beliefs	23
Intercessory prayer - Red Sox Nation II	24
Curses, omens, exorcism & bad luck – facts & fallacies	25
8. Conclusion - Creating your own reality	27 - 28
Full spectrum health	27
9. References	29 – 34